

TEN REFLECTIONS, IN LIGHT AND SHADOW

A first look at the MBN Wisdom collection

LIAM HELTON

TO THE READER

Sixteen years ago I started writing one of these every morning. Not for an audience — there wasn't one. It was a way to keep track of my own thinking, and to see, later, whether any of it had moved.

It moved. There are more than fifteen thousand of them now, and I've spent the last stretch of time sorting them into books, each one built around a single thing a person has to work out: money, ego, love, faith, what happens when it ends.

The ten here are a sample of that work — each reflection paired with an image made for it, the way the finished volumes are put together. They aren't advice. They're just what I found, written down on the morning I found it.

Take what's useful. Leave the rest.

*Don't let it be about MONEY but relationships.
AWESOME relationships provide the capital needed to make moments even MORE exciting.*

REFLECTION #7526

If you allow money to be your trigger, you may end up shooting yourself.

REFLECTION #891

We do NOT lack money. We do NOT lack material goods. We do NOT lack physical requirements. We lack unconditional LOVE...

REFLECTION #8309

Man owns nothing as he travels through this experience. The ego whispers in his ear as if what he holds for the moment is his... but that will slowly fade away too.

The home, car, and all material objects are nothing more than props allowing man to gravitate toward egotistical means and further away from his true divine self.

A man who sits proudly on a mountain of goods is literally starting from the bottom for self-worth.

*I once followed the MONEY trail only to lose my wallet. I once followed LUST only to be let down.
Then I started listening to my HEART, and my world
finally came alive.*

REFLECTION #3468

In 2004 I filed for bankruptcy on $155,000. Am I ashamed of that? No way! It took that experience for me to separate my needs and wants and truly understand the value of a dollar. I don't feel the need to cry over poured milk when I dislike dairy products anyway.

REFLECTION #2098

*My watch isn't a Rolex, but it tells the time correctly.
I don't drive a Bentley, but my car gets me where I need to be. I may not live in a million-dollar home, but I'm grateful I have one. I don't eat the finest foods, but I never go hungry. I'm so blessed with what I do have that I feel just as blessed as those who have nicer things than me. One's perception can make all the difference to a better life.*

Poverty is a state of mind.

REFLECTION #2986

I've seen happier people who have nothing than some of which hold material wealth. It is the mind that needs to prosper and not so much the wallet.

REFLECTION #1933

When one gives up their last dollar without concern, a trail of richness will not hide from them. Money is just a form of energy that must be circulated on a continuous basis in order to receive the momentum it radiates. The gift is in giving...

REFLECTION #5201